Hammond 'pleased' with Finney's State of the State address; education 'number one priority'

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

"I'm extremely pleased with the governor's recommendations for FHSU."

That was President Edward Hammond's response Wednesday morning to Governor Joan Finney's State of the State address.

Hammond said education is Finney's "number one priority."

"These proposals recognize that our small teacher-student ratio and computer education environment is worth saving," he said.

The president held a press conference the morning after the governor's speech to discuss recommendations Finney made for higher education and how they would affect Fort Hays State.

"First of all," Hammond said, "I think it's very clear that her major initiative is higher education. The new dollars that are being allocated are being recommended to Washburn and the six regents institutions."

"The governor has said all along, since her campaign, that she's interested in educating the young people of Kansas, and she's kept her word from day one."

The governor's proposal includes a 7 percent faculty salary increase.

Hammond said the salary increase "recognizes the fact that we are 10 percent behind our peer institutions in faculty salaries...[plus] with a 19 percent increase in high school graduates attending college by the year 2000, we are going to need more faculty. Taking this into consideration, the governor feels we need to start preparing, as it will be on our front doorstep soon."

He said FHSU is fastest growing of the regents schools.

"In fact, one of every two high school graduates in western Kansas comes to Fort Hays State," Hammond said, also mentioning the increasing number of students from eastern and central Kansas who attend FHSU.

However, President Hammond did not mention where the money for the salary increase would come from.

The Wichita Eagle reported in Wednesday's paper that "almost half of the increase would be financed by increases in student tuition—a 5 percent increase at Emporia State, FHSU and Pittsburg State universities, and a 10 percent increase at Wichita State University, Kansas State University, and the University of Kansas."

Nate Halverson, student government president, said, "Seeing as 85 percent of our student body meets federal standards for financial aid...I am really, vehemently opposed to any tuition increase."

Other recommendations Governor Finney made for FHSU include:

- A 2.5 percent increase for all state employees.

- A 3 percent increase in student wages.

- One half of a million dollars in faculty positions. Hammond called this "critical with our expanding student body, to keep our low teacher/student ratio at an appropriate level."

- Additional funding for the servicing of new buildings and additional full-time positions.

- A 6.9 percent increase in state general funds for FHSU. This was the highest proposed increase of all the regents schools. PSU was next with 5.6 percent increase, and KSU had the lowest, at 2.9 percent. Hammond explained the increases in funding were parallel with increases in enrollment.

He said the funding increase is "very timely," as the growth rate of FHSU is increasing. Although Hammond had no spring enrollment numbers to announce yet, fall '93 enrollment was right at 5800.

Provost Rodolfo Arevalo said this spring is "already above last spring's enrollment."

The question of Washburn University becoming a regent's school was also brought up at the conference. Hammond said he expects the issue to be in bill form in the Legislature "within the next couple of weeks."

"I think the legislature needs to take a look at where they're going with it," Halverson said.

"It's a great idea on paper, but...it's just not possible, considering the fact that we can't find enough money to fund everything with the institutions we have. I don't know how we'd get the money for another university."

"There's just no money there to do it," Halverson said.

"In addition, the governor has recommended that the state of Kansas employ an independent consultant to 'examine the school system from kindergarten through 12 and the post-secondary schools.'"

This "could have implications for the Washburn issue and with the merger with Barton County, as well," Hammond said.

The conference was held at 9 a.m. Wednesday, in the conference room of Sheridan Hall.

New renewal form to shorten financial aid process

Crystal Holdren
Staff writer

It is that time of year again when students and parents are working to get their income taxes done, so they can fill out that dreadful financial aid form.

However for most students, the financial aid office, located in Custer Hall, is attempting to make it easier.

Karl Metzger, director of student financial assistance, said his office sent out letters in December informing students of the new renewal process.

The renewal process will allow students to fill out a shorter application form for the Pell Grant, loans, work study, etc.

The application can be picked up at the financial aid office. Applications are now available and will be until the end of the school year.

The renewal process does not mean students will receive the same amount in Pell Grants or loans as last year because that is determined by income, but it will save time for both students and the financial aid office.

"It will require a whole new remake of the office, but we're hoping it will go a lot faster," Metzger said.

He said some part-time student workers will have to be hired to enter the information from the applications into the computers.

Only 59 other schools offer this program and Fort Hays State is the only one in Kansas, Metzger said.

"Most of the other schools in Kansas know we're doing it [renewal process] and I think they're a little jealous," he said.

The renewal process applies to any student who is currently enrolled at FHSU.

Incoming students can also use this process. They just need to fill out a first-time application. By using this process, these students can avoid sending their application through American College Test.

Unlike the ACT process, FHSU will only process those applications for FHSU students.

The difference between the previous forms and the renewal application is the number of questions to fill out, Metzger said.

Instead of the approximately 100 questions, students only have to answer 30. Also, the time between sending in the forms and receiving a reply is shorter.

Rather than taking four weeks, Metzger said it will only take four or five days. This cuts off "that whole cumbersome process," he said.

"We're hoping it will save a lot of time for our students, and hopefully in the long run save time for us," Metzger said.

He said for independent students, the form should take very little time, but for dependent students, they will still be required to get their parent's income figures.

By getting the applications in Custer Hall, the office "can take advantage of what Dr. Hammond calls 'high-touch' philosophy where students can come up here and pick up the application," Metzger said.

"We can talk to them about questions they may have about the application and guide them to the mistakes they may want to avoid."

After the students fill out the form and return it to the office, the financial aid office will then send it to the Department of Education where they will determine eligibility.

Metzger said the financial aid office has two computers to sending material to the federal government, and these will be the ones used for the renewal applications.

Students will not be required to send their income tax forms in with their renewal application, he said. After the government sends back their decision on aid, then they will inform the financial aid office if they need a student to send their tax information, Metzger said.

"We help our students as much as we can to go through the bureaucratic stuff they go through with financial aid," Metzger said.

He said the application renewal is a new service function of the financial aid office and "we're kind of excited about it."

Students have already taken advantage of the renewal process, Metzger said.

"If we find out this is faster and beneficial then Fort Hays will continue to do this," Metzger said.

Hepatitis vaccines offered at FHSU

Tammi Harris

A virus not often talked about has recently caught the attention of Fort Hays State University. The virus is hepatitis.

Nearly 10 percent of acute infections occur in young adults, so colleges are in the prime age group for it, Patu Scott, director of Student Health Center, said.

Hepatitis can be prevented with a vaccine. This vaccine is now being offered at the Student Health Center. The vaccine is a series of three shots which last four years.

Since the price is so high, the Student Health Center is offering a way to cut the cost.

Students getting the shot can pay $30 a time instead of a $90 lump sum, Scott said.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration requires that any employee that is exposed to body fluids can be given the vaccine without charge, Scott said.

People who work in hospitals, universities, custodial workers, plumbers, or anyone who is in contact with body fluids will get the vaccine for free.

Nursing students are also required to get the shot, but it is at their own cost.

So far this year, the Student Health Center has started 85 series of shots.

Hepatitis is a viral infection that will affect five percent of Americans in their lifetime, Scott said. Being a viral infection, hepatitis just has to run its course.

According to the Merriam-Webster Dictionary, hepatitis is an "inflammation of the liver."

It can be transmitted many different ways, such as through blood, semen, vaginal secretions and saliva.

Considering all known cases of hepatitis, the cause of 40 percent of the cases is unknown, Scott said.

Hepatitis is transmitted in many of the same ways as the HIV virus.

Scott is concerned because people really seem to get concerned about the HIV virus, and not hepatitis.

She said hepatitis is just as dangerous as the HIV virus, but in its own way.

Scott explained how HIV and hepatitis vary. She said that HIV is a very fragile virus, and can be very

KFHS, athletic department involved in minor NCAA recruiting violation

Squire R. Boone
Copy editor

A violation of the National Collegiate Athletic Association recruiting regulations by Fort Hays State was reported to the NCAA by Tom Mahon, associate director of athletics, late last semester.

The violation stemmed from a series of interviews with various FHSU athletic coaches aired on KFHS, the student-run campus radio station.

The interviews were aired during the half-times of live broadcasts of '93 home football games of the local high schools.

Interviews with college coaches can't be used to gain an unfair advantage in the recruiting process," Mahon said.

He said none of the coaches were aware of how the interviews were being used. He also said he did not discover the violation until one of the interviewers asked to interview him for half-time of one of the games.

Section 12.5.3 of the NCAA regulation states the student athlete shall not "make any endorsement, express or implied, of any commercial product or service."

Tom Spicer, athletic director, said the use of the interviews constituted a use of student-athletes to advertise FHSU's "commercial product or service."

"It's a pretty obscure rule, but it is in the books."

"The whole thing was a good-will gesture on the part of KFHS, but it was not in compliance," Spicer said.

However, Spicer said, the incident was only a secondary infraction of the rules. To be considered a primary violation, the act must be intentional.

"No one intended to gain a recruiting advantage," he said. "The purpose of a university is to teach and prepare. Some mistakes are going to be made along the way."

Because of the nature of the violation, Spicer said there will be no severe ramifications for FHSU.

He said the NCAA required FHSU to provide evidence of safeguards to prevent similar incidents from happening again.

All interviews with coaches will now be set up through the Sports Information Office. Spicer said this will help in the prevention of similar violations.

Directory provides needed resources

The AIDS Resource Network of Ellis County recently published the "Directory of Services Available to People in Western Kansas Related to HIV Infection" (see related story page 4).

This directory gives locations where AIDS tests are available and offers various resources for people with AIDS.

It includes listings of clergy support, dieticians, legal aid and other business and support people who can help people with AIDS.

A county has to have at least 10 reported cases of AIDS before it is listed. Ellis County is not listed, so there are only between zero and nine reported cases.

It is impressive that this directory has been published before a large need arises. Usually, efforts of this type are made after the fact.

The Network should be applauded for planning ahead. Although there are none or few cases in Ellis County, this state probably won't last forever.

And when the problem does arise, the directory will be there. People won't have to fear that they will be turned away because of their illness. Without this directory, many resources would go untapped.

People need to remember that this is a disease that anyone can get. It doesn't just happen to homosexuals and drug users. It can happen to anyone.

At a time when the fear of AIDS is at a high, the people in this directory are willing to offer their services and their support for people with the disease. Their courage and selflessness is an example we should all follow.

Rules for parents Children require special treatment

I'm sure we have all experienced walking into a store and seeing children crying and screaming because they don't get what they want, while their parents are stressed out and about ready to beat the child.

Most of the time, children just try to see how much they can get away with and how easily adults give in to them.

Some of us are already parents, but for the rest of us who aren't parenthood is not all that far away. In the past year I have often thought: will I be a parent who always gives in or will I be one of those who never gives their child anything?

It seemed to me that at times it is hard to deal with children and just how to discipline them. And then a week ago I came across a piece of paper entitled "A Memorandum From Your Child."

This is how it went.

1. Don't spoil me. I know quite well that I ought not to have all I ask for. I'm only testing you.
2. Don't be afraid to be firm with me. I prefer it. It lets me know where I stand.
3. Don't use force with me. It teaches me that power is all that counts. I will respond more readily to being led.
4. Don't be inconsistent. That confuses me and makes me try harder to get away with everything I can.
5. Don't make promises, you may not be able to keep them. That will discourage my trust in you.
6. Don't fall for my provocation when I say and do things just to upset you. Then I'll try for more such "victories."
7. Don't be too upset when I say "I hate you!" I don't mean it, but I want you to feel sorry for what you have done to me.
8. Don't make me feel smaller than I am. I will make up for it by behaving like a "big shot."

9. Don't do things for me that I can do for myself. It makes me feel like a baby, and I may continue to put you in my service.

10. Don't let my "bad habits" get me a lot of your attention. It only encourages me to continue them.

11. Don't correct me in front of people. I'll take much more notice if you talk quietly with me in private.

12. Don't try to discuss my behavior in the heat of a conflict. For some reason my hearing is not very good at this time and my cooperation is even worse. It is all right to take the action required, but let's not talk about it until later.

Crystal Holdren
Staff writer

13. Don't try to preach to me. You'd be surprised how well I knew what's right and wrong.

14. Don't make me feel that my mistakes are sins. I have to learn to make mistakes without feeling that I am no good.

15. Don't nag. If you do, I shall have to protect myself by appearing deaf.

16. Don't demand explanations for my wrong behavior. I really don't know why I did it.

17. Don't tax my honesty too much. I am easily frightened into telling lies.

18. Don't forget that I love and use experimenting. I learn from it, so please put up with it.

19. Don't protect me from consequences. I need to learn from experience.

20. Don't take too much notice of my small ailments. I may learn to enjoy poor health if it gets me much attention.

21. Don't put me off when I ask HONEST questions. If you do, you will find that I stop asking and seek my information elsewhere.

22. Don't answer "silly" or meaningless questions. I just want you to keep busy with me.

23. Don't even think that it is beneath your dignity to apologize to me. An honest apology makes me feel surprisingly warm toward you.

24. Don't even suggest that you are perfect or infallible. It gives me too much to live up to.

25. Don't worry about the little amount of time we spent together. It is how we spend it that counts.

26. Don't let my fears arouse your anxiety. Then I will become more afraid, show me courage.

27. Don't forget that I can't thrive without lots of understanding and encouragement, but I don't need to tell you that, do I?

TREAT ME THE WAY YOU TREAT YOUR FRIENDS. THEN I WILL BE YOUR FRIEND, TOO. REMEMBER, I LEARN MORE FROM A MODEL THAN A CRITIC.

So from now on when that child is just pushing you to the limit, stop and think about the above points.

I hope that this article will help you in further endeavors with your child.

Maybe if you look at your child differently then you and he might become friends, you never know.

Writer can't escape from Leader

You know that one saying about "the more things change, the more they stay the same"? I've never understood that phrase. It just went over my head. I couldn't get it. So I came up with my own. I think it's rather intelligent. "The more things stay the same, the more they stay the same." Now, does that make sense, or what? I mean, here I am, still a sophomore, still on a diet, I still haven't grown any taller, and no matter how hard I try, I can't get away from ex-editor, Rebecca Lofton.

Not that Rebecca's a bad editor, on the contrary. She's one of the best editors I've seen in my four semesters down in Picken Hall (where the Leader is published, freshmen). I'm only saying that because I know she won't read this. (She never reads my columns unless she thinks I'm going to say something that could get her in trouble. As if I'd ever do that.)

But I told her I wasn't going to write for the Leader this semester. I even told you guys, the readers, that I wouldn't be coming back. I thought 20 credit hours and a 36-hour a-week job was enough. Maybe I'm a goddess who can tackle this load and be a dedicated reporter on the side. Yeah (huh huh). She said goddess. Huh huh-huh.

What I want to know is, where is my cute messenger god boyfriend who was supposed to inform me of this ability. I didn't know I had? And where is my really hot goddess car? (If I'm a goddess, I should at least get a hot car, don't you think?)

And I have tried avoiding Rebecca. I even disconnected my phone. But she chased me down, and so here I am, writing a story about President

Hammond's latest press conference, and I don't think what I get paid for it will buy me a hot goddess car, either.

I really should be getting back to the point here, which is... which is... which is... oh, yeah, which is that the more things stay the same, the more they stay the same. I was reminded of this again while standing in the enrollment line earlier this week. It reminded me of my freshmen year, when the lines were, well, long. They're especially long now, because I get to spend all that time in line not flirting with every guy within sight, as I did last year.

Stephanie Baccus

Instead, I spent my 45 minutes thinking about how I was going to repay my student loan and contemplating why in the world no one gives scholarships for majoring in Coors Light or being a slave to the university newspaper. They could at least make it worth three credits or something. Beer Consumption 121, or How to Write Stupid Columns 565 (I'd be the professor for that one). Notice it's an upper level course. For the advanced bullshooters. So, if you ask me if I'm writing for the Leader this semester, I'll say no, because I told you I wouldn't. And if Rebecca asks if you've seen me lately, you haven't.

Or I'm in an important meeting in the mall, and I just can't be bothered.

Or maybe I'm in a class now. (I know that's stretching it, but, without laughing, pretend I attend class occasionally.)

Or I'm in jail because I killed our photographer for the wonderful mug shots he takes of us on the Leader staff. (He makes me feel like grade school, when we all had that wise-cracking photographer who talked like a disc jockey to make us smile. Jeez.)

Well, I've got to drop my Coors major, (my other two should keep me busy) so I'd better go do some studying or something. If Rebecca calls, I'm not writing anymore for her, and I mean it this time, but you don't know for sure, because you haven't seen me in weeks and don't know where she can reach me at, ok? Thanks! -sh quickly, whereas hepatitis is a very hardy virus that can survive many things. Hepatitis is a much more communicable virus.

Hepatitis can be treated by supportive therapy or even steroids. However, at present, there is no cure.

Within the last year and a half, the American College Health Association has promoted the hepatitis vaccine in order to make people more aware of it.

"We're trying to educate people more about hepatitis and about the vaccine," Scott said.

"I think that eventually it will be like the measles vaccine. I think the only thing that is keeping it (from being required) now is the cost."

She said some babies are now receiving the vaccine.

Scott is emphatic about pushing the vaccine. She said people don't realize hepatitis is as serious as HIV.

She said she hopes people will listen to the educational messages and take it to heart, because their is no cure for the virus at this time.

Hammond announces plans for additional on-campus housing

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

If finding an apartment is a difficult task now, President Edward Hammond would like to make the search a little bit easier. And the faculty senate is willing to risk a 7 percent salary increase until more questions are answered about Washburn University's possible entry as a regent school.

President Hammond said at a press conference Wednesday morning the university has decided to build additional housing on campus, in the form of apartments, for Fort Hays State students.

The apartments will help solve a need for housing as demonstrated in a recent study. The report, commissioned by six county financial institutions, was conducted by the Ellis County Coalition for Economic Development, with help from the Docking Institute for Public Affairs and Betty White, a Kansas State University consultant.

"I've read the study and it does a good job of examining the housing resources in Hays, and it's clear to me that additional housing is necessary for the university's growing population of students, as well as for the city of Hays," Hammond said.

Though Hammond said preliminary plans for the complex will not be ready until the fall of '95, he did say the university is "looking at engineering specifications, funding strategies, and pricing, so we have a good idea of rent schedules and such."

That information will be available for a town meeting planned for a later date. The purpose of the meeting is to collect community input before any final plans are made.

Property behind the president's house has been targeted for the new apartments.

Hammond described the area being in a triangle surrounded by Eighth Street, U.S. 183 Alternate (old highway 40), and Big Creek.

Hammond said because of a deep depression in the ground mentioned, the complex "might have some kind of lake" in between two sections of apartments.

The university decided to proceed with the apartments after learning private lenders and realtors are not currently planning new housing construction in the area.

Another topic discussed at the press conference was the faculty senate, which reaffirmed on Monday night its resolution to keep Washburn University out of the regents system.

Washburn, in Topeka, is currently a city school, but receives grants from the state. This year, Washburn's grants totalled $6.8 million.

Dianna Koerner, faculty senate president, said, "We kind of said to them, 'Until you can prove to us why we need another institution in this system, and you can answer our questions, we're going to be against allowing Washburn in.'"

"We could lose our salary increase; the legislature doesn't have to follow the governor's recommendations," she said.

Koerner said the resolution lists several factors must be met before the faculty senate would support Washburn. Some of those factors include a significant pay raise and a promise of no budget cuts in the future.

Koerner mentioned some questions that would need to be answered before the senate would support the issue.

"What is it going to do to the university? And what kind of impact will it have on other regents schools? Emporia State... could lose 800 students over four years. Emporia is our size; losing 800 students would really hurt," she said.

Koerner explained because Emporia is close to Topeka, students from Topeka who are now going to less expensive, state-supported Emporia State would attend Washburn if it became a state-supported school, also.

"Also, the faculty at Washburn are making a lot more than faculty at the regents supported schools, too. What are they going to do? Not get any salary raises until we can catch up? There are a lot of questions that need to be addressed," Koerner said.

PFM campus-wide food drive falls short of goals

Rebecca Lofton
Managing editor

"Our original intent was to help the community and show good will on behalf of the students and the university," Angela Bodendorfer, building director for food service, said. "Good will and food for all. Those were the original intentions of the Fort Hays State Professional Food Management staff Nov. 28 when it initiated a non-perishable goods drive."

PFM called each of the residence halls personally and posted signs to advertise the event.

PFM announced it would double all donations.

The goal was one pound of food for every person living on campus. That would be approximately 966 pounds, according to Bodendorfer.

At the end of the drive, on Dec. 10, 1993, only 436 pounds of food had been collected. Three hundred of those pounds were donated by PFM.

She had anticipated a good turnout. In the end she was let down.

Bodendorfer said, "I was really disappointed, compared to last year, with the response. Based on last year, we anticipated a much better turnout."

Bodendorfer said none of the halls, other than Wiest donated anything.

She said, "Wiest was the only hall to give us any food. They gave us 130 pounds. Last year they didn't give us anything."

Wiest Hall had not donated anything in 1992. In 1993, the hall put forth more effort.

Sixth floor went to the greatest effort, holding a chili feed, open to all Wiest Hall residents.

Residents received one bowl of chili for one non-perishable item.

Dusty Fulk, 6th floor Wiest Hall resident assistant, said, "One can of food for one bowl of chili. It was a good success. I was really surprised."

"Originally, it was a floor function. When I saw there wasn't many canned goods at the drive, I just incorporated it."

Fulk said approximately 50-55 men showed up for the feed which was held in the 6th floor lobby.

Fulk said he thought the drive was a good idea.

"I couldn't believe it (that no one was donating). Especially with PFM doubling all donations."

Bodendorfer said, "We had just hoped to give back to the community a little of all they do for us."

Kelly Center psychologist co-authors article

Melissa Chaffin
Features editor

Karen McFadden, Kelly Center staff psychologist, co-authored an article which will appear in the January issue of "The Journal of Counseling Psychology."

McFadden's article is entitled "Efficacy of Leader-led and Self-directed Career Workshops for Middle-aged and Older Adults."

McFadden co-authored the article with Stephen Robbins, Judy Chartrand and Richard Lee, all of Virginia Commonwealth University where McFadden finished graduate school.

"We were interested in seeing whether certain types of people would get better results in certain groups, leader-led versus self-di-

"People improved in both groups. It didn't matter if they were high or low in sociability, which was excellent," McFadden said.

McFadden has been employed as the coordinator of psychological services at the Kelly Center since August.

She is a therapist at the Kelly Center and a teacher of a master's level practicum class.

"I really like my job. I love counseling, groups and teaching, so it's perfect for me," McFadden said.

McFadden said "The Journal of Counseling Psychology" is one of the leading American journals in counseling and psychology.

Her article in "The Journal of Counseling Psychology" will be available in the Forsyth Library when it comes out.

rected," McFadden said.

She said the group based its research on a seven-week class. Pre-test and post-test scores were compared for 150 participants.

All participants were middle-aged to elderly and fell between the ages of 45 and 72.

AIDS Resource Network of Ellis County supports HIV patients

Melissa Chaffin
Features editor

Although the number of AIDS cases in Ellis County is not outstanding, professionals are available to support and care for HIV-positive patients in the area.

The AIDS Resource Network of Ellis County is a group of 40 to 50 professionals in the Hays area who support and assist people who are HIV positive.

The Network recently developed the "Directory of Services Available to People in Western Kansas Related to HIV Infection" which is now available to interested persons.

She said there is not a specific number of known HIV-positive cases in Ellis county. A county must have at least 10 reported cases before it is listed, so Ellis County must have between zero and nine cases of HIV.

To order a directory, contact Marian Shapiro, Planned Parenthood director, at 628-2434 or 628-8537.

The group has been working on the Network for approximately one year. Members of the Network vary from doctors and dietitians to clergy, dentists and insurance agents.

Patti Scott, Network coordinator, said members of the Network respect the confidentiality of all clients; strive to help clients enhance their physical, mental, spiritual, and emotional health; help clients maintain dignity and self-esteem in the face of adversity; advocate comprehensive education to reduce the risk of HIV transmission; and treat individuals compassionately without regard to age, race, disability, gender, religion, sexual orientation, ethnicity, or socioeconomic status.

Scott said the Network and the directory were created to aid people in western Kansas in finding places where they will be serviced with care and support, rather than turned away or mistreated.

Scott said, "Services are very clear in the larger cities with a high number of HIV cases. What we wanted was a group of people that would be supportive of people with HIV cases here in Hays."

"Everyone has been very excited and committed to the efforts of the network," Scott said. "Anyone who can work to help the group can be involved."

The Network was created to serve the immediate Hays area, but Scott said all of northwest Kansas will be served.

"Most of it is Hays, but certainly we know we'll draw in the 15-county area (of northwest Kansas)," Scott said.

As director of the Student Health Center, Scott said, "The network grew out of our needs as we work with people."

"We obviously have 6,000 students here who need to learn to live long, healthy lives.

"In college health, we have very specific initiatives to educate, and HIV education is an important part of that. Students are at risk for contracting HIV," Scott said.

She said the benefits of the Network and the directory will affect family members, as well as HIV-positive patients, and does not foresee any disadvantages to the group.

"I think to have all the information is very time-saving and certainly easier on the patient. Some people don't even realize what help is available in Hays," Scott said.

The AIDS Resource Network meets for lunch on the last Wednesday of February, April, June, September and November (months with less than 31 days).

"We are always looking for people who are supportive. We don't want anyone who'll work against the group. We're all committed to confidentiality," Scott said.

Tigers suffer frustrating loss to Chadron State

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

The Tiger men's basketball team suffered a frustrating, 102-92 loss to Chadron State College last night in Fort Hays State's first conference game of the season.

FHSU got off to a slow start, found themselves down 10 points early in the first half and never seemed to find the momentum they needed to stay within reach.

Still struggling, the Tigers went into intermission behind, 50-44.

After halftime, FHSU sparked a short-lived comeback that tied the game at 57 apiece.

However, the Tigers' hopes diminished when head coach Gary Garner received his second technical foul of the game and was ejected with six minutes left to play.

FHSU could not seem to make a dent in Chadron State's comfortable ten-point lead during the final minutes and when the buzzer sounded, the Tigers had fallen, 102-92.

FHSU's overall record falls to 9-4 and the team starts out Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference play 0-1.

Chadron State raises its overall record to 7-5 and leaves its RMAC record untarnished at 2-0.

Dennis Edwards led the Tigers in scoring with 29 points. Kenneth Haywood, Jerry Dixon and Steven McKelvey followed with 20, 17 and 13 respectively.

Dixon pulled down eleven rebounds, and Haywood had 10. Chapanez Hale served up six assists.

Lady Tigers fall to Chadron State, 66-65

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

It was a closely played contest throughout the entire game, but the Lady Tigers saw defeat in the end as they were edged by Chadron State, 66-65, last night.

Fort Hays State got off to an excellent start in the first half, but Chadron State stayed close.

The lead changed hands numerous times during the first half, but FHSU headed to the locker room with a promising 33-31 advantage at intermission.

The game remained close throughout the second half but the Lady Tigers failed to pull off the win as they fell to Chadron State, 66-65.

With last night's loss, FHSU's record falls to 5-8 overall.

Kris Osthoff, junior forward, led the Lady Tigers in scoring with 13 points. Kristin Wiebe, junior forward, pulled down twelve rebounds. Barb Steinlage, senior guard dished out four assists and came up with two steals.

Indoor track team begins season tomorrow

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

The Tiger track team will begin its indoor season tomorrow at the Kansas University Invitational in Lawrence.

The pentathlon will begin at 10 a.m. The field events begin at noon, and the running events start at 2 p.m.

Head Track Coach Jim Krob said, "This first meet is just going to be an opener for us. We're anxious to get started."

"We take our indoor season pretty lightly. It gives us time to prepare for the outdoor season and get us in shape. We just look at it as a way to tune-up for the outdoor season."

The Tigers' have a large roster this season. The team is comprised of 53 men and 31 women.

However, only eight men and nine women will attend Saturday's invitational. The runners will be: Krista Adams, Chantay Brush, Nicole Cordill, Heather Cromwell, Kim Hein, Leslie Nielsen, Danielle Stohs, Tammy True, Summer Vann, Keith Blackwell, Marla Cook, Keith Eck, Jeremy Hawks, A.J. Lee, Chris Smith, T.J. Trout, Scott Wiehael and Jamie Wren.

The Tigers' 1994 indoor track schedule:

Jan. 15 - K.U. Invitational
Jan. 22 - UN-Lincoln Invitational
Jan. 29 - Alex Francis Invitational
Jan. 30 - High School Invitational
Feb. 5 - Jayhawk Invitational
Feb. 12 - UN-Kearney Invitational
Feb. 16 - FHSU Invitational
Feb. 19 - Kansas State Invitational
Feb. 26 - RMAC Championships
Mar. 5 - Last Chance Meet
Mar. 11 and 12 - NCAA Division II Championships

Teams compete in intramural three-on-three basketball

Travis Morisse
Photo editor

Twenty-six men's teams and four women's teams participated in the Intramural three-on-three basketball competition last night in the Cunningham Hall gyms.

"It's a Schick razor blade promotion, they send razors, T-shirts and duffel bags," Bud Moeckel, director of Intramurals and recreational sports, said.

The competition was a double elimination tournament with the "Schick Superhoops" nationwide rules.

A round in the tournament consisted of the best two of three games to seven points winning by two points.

If a team loses possession of the ball, the opposing team must take it past the three point line before being able to take a shot. The opposing team is awarded a point for all fouls after the fourth foul in a game.

Moeckel said there are approximately 25 to 30 teams that compete every year.

"We have a great group of kids. We're real happy to have that type of people to work with and great facilities.

"Dr. Fuertges, chairman of the health and human performance department, has been very supportive and we're really appreciative," Moeckel said.

"It's an outlet for them, they can come over and let out their frustrations."

"These guys have all been high school athletes, they can't shut off the switch. They want to play some more. They look forward to it," Moeckel said.

"It's pretty fun, cause even if you lose the first game, you get to keep playing," James Ward, Phillipsburg freshman, said.

The women's tournament winning team was the G-Strings team consisting of Nikole Sumner, Norton senior, Amanda Sumner, Norton freshman, and Crista Schrum, Norton senior.

The men's tournament winning team was the J.C. team consisting of Greg Snipes, Junction City senior, Derrick Green, Junction City junior, Nate Poole, Aurora, Colo. sophomore, and Alan Stein, Spearville senior. The second place team was the Eisenhower Power team and the third place team was TWA.

Ad Correction Status of Apple Equipment Contract for Student Purchase

The State Contract for student purchase of Apple products expired on October 31 and was not renewed. The current status is that the Apple lawyers and the State of Kansas Purchasing Division have been negotiating a new contract for over two months with no resolution. I have been assured by Apple that the new contract will be in place just any day now. Regardless of the Leader newspapers ads we cannot place an order for you at this time but we can provide consultation in anticipation of a reseller agreement coming forth. When the contract is finally renewed we will advertise that fact to the campus.

Spirit squad fires up Tiger fans

Kristin Holmes
Staff writer

Hard work, determination and hours of practice are things all athletes have in common.

No one knows this better than the Fort Hays State spirit squad.

The squad practices on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

They also have an optional practice on Thursdays, along with individual work on their own.

"They really have to work hard. Sometimes people don't realize how hard," Terry Siek, spirit squad coach, said.

"Right now we have six yell leaders and eight cheerleaders.

"Sometimes the numbers vary from fall semester to spring semester, when people find out how much work is actually involved," he said.

They also travel with the teams to away games.

Siek said the team went to two away games and to the play-offs in California for football.

He said they also go to all basketball games that are three hours away or less. They will also attend the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference basketball tournament in Denver.

The squad members are rewarded with a scholarship for their hard work.

"They get a $740 dorm scholarship. Freshmen and sophomores are required to live in the dorms," Siek said.

"But after that, they are on their own as to whether they want to live in the dorms or not."

Every year, tryouts are held to determine who will be cheerleaders for the next year. This year, tryouts are April 8-9.

"At 5 p.m. on the eighth we will begin. I usually go over the rules first. Then we go over jumps, stunts, and cheers," Siek said.

"We teach them an eight-count routine, the first four eight-counts to the fight song, and they have to make up the last two eight-counts."

"They also have to do three jumps and learn a chant. After that we review on Saturday, the ninth, and then have try outs."

"We have a short interview process towards the end," he said.

Siek said these are the only requirements for the squad, because the squad does not have a weight requirement.

"I feel it is unhealthy to have a weight requirement on someone. It is based on body fat not on weight," Siek said. "I want them to be healthy and have low body fat."

After tryouts, the squad did not see each other again until summer camp.

The team attended the National Cheerleading Association camp in Lincoln, Neb.

"It was the first time they were together as a squad. The stress of camp brought them much closer together," Siek said.

The squad was awarded with the Circle of Winners bronze award. They also had four squad members who were nominated for All-American. Wayne Tillitson, Ransom senior, Chet Hensley, Liberal senior, Misti Augustine, Hays freshman and Christie Villarreal, Hays senior.

After cheerleading camp, the squad put on a camp of their own for junior and senior high school girls last July.

"The team made up all of their own material and taught it to the girls. There are usually about 100 girls who attend the camp," Siek said.

The school year finally started and the spirit squad put all their new material and hard work to the test.

"There is a big difference in the squad this year," Siek said.

"Only four people returned, the rest are freshmen. They do a lot more tumbling and acrobats this year. I think they are more fun to watch."

"They are definitely a fun group to see grow and develop," he said.

Tillitson said he feels the squad has more talent this year.

"We are more athletic this year. We are doing more advanced things, and I think it looks better."

"We are doing a lot more tumbling, which is great. My first love has always been tumbling," he said. It is Tillitson's fourth year on the squad, but he said some things never change.

"I feel that sometimes it is hard for us to get the crowd involved and excited. I would like to see the students and fans get more involved," he said.

Siek said the squad has been working on things to get the crowd more involved.

"It is different during basketball season because the squad is so much closer to the crowd."

"They have been using signs and doing more pyramids and stunts to get the crowd involved," he said.

Siek also said the squad is currently working on a half-time routine with dancing, stunts and pyramids. They will be performing the routine sometime in February.

"Sometimes people don't realize what we do and how much time is involved. I wish we would get more respect and recognition," Siek said.

"People stop by and watch us practice and are really amazed at what we do. I think the attitudes about cheerleading are changing."

"The sport is gaining more and more respect. The airheaded, blonde image is out."

"The administration here at FHSU is great. We get full backing from them, and it is really appreciated. It makes all their hard work and long hours worthwhile," Siek said.

Edwards named RMAC player of the week

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

Dennis Edwards, a 6'5" 220 lb. junior forward for the Tiger men's basketball team, was named the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference player of the week for his performance in Fort Hays State's 89-83 victory over Ottawa University on Jan. 6.

Edwards tallied 36 points, seven rebounds and one assist. He hit 15 of 22 from the field and nailed six of eight from the line.

Edwards also scored a crucial bucket in the game. With 2:50 remaining in the game, he stole the ball and dribbled the length of the floor for a layup that gave the Tigers an 82-80 lead. The Tigers held on to that lead and went on to chalk up the win.

Edwards now leads the RMAC in average scoring per game with 25.5. He also leads the conference in field goal percentage with 0.647.

While proving to be a powerful force at FHSU's post position, he has made 131 of 202 shots from the floor and 44 of 76 from the free-throw line for 308 total points.

Edwards has pulled down 92 rebounds, averaging 7.7 per game. He has also made seven assists and three steals.

Edwards is a newcomer to the FHSU squad this season. He was recruited from Alvin Junior College (Tex.) where he led in scoring as a sophomore with 25.1 points per game and shot 63 percent from the field.

He snatched five rebounds and served up two assists per contest. Edwards was named to the first team South Texas Junior College Athletic Conference and gained all-region honors.

As a sophomore, Edwards scored a career high 44 points against San Jacinto Junior College last year at Alvin Junior College.

Women's basketball team gets fresh start

Kristin Holmes
Staff writer

"A whole new season has started for the Fort Hays State women's basketball team," Tom Mahon, head women's basketball coach, said.

"We only have twelve games left in the season. Twelve are conference games, and two are non-conference."

The Lady Tigers had their first conference game Thursday against Chadron State. They will play their second conference game Saturday against Colorado School of Mines.

The team played Colorado Mines earlier in the season at the Kearney Classic Tournament. FHSU won 76-53.

"We have beat them in the past, but that doesn't mean anything," Mahon said.

"We are still going to have to play well against them to win. They are getting better and better so we can't take anything for granted."

Mahon said the team is extremely excited about the season.

"Everyone is really upbeat. It is the most important part of the season."

son. "We have to stay positive, win or lose, because you never know what can happen," he said.

Mahon says he hopes the team can improve their 5-7 record from last semester.

Over the Christmas break, the Lady Tigers beat Bethel College, 93-57. Kristin Wiebe, junior center, scored 21 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Mahon said everyone had a chance to play in the game.

"It gave everyone a little more experience on the floor," he said.

The team also played Angelo State from San Angelo, Texas, over the break. FHSU lost 91-69.

"It was just a situation in which they played extremely well and we didn't. San Angelo State shot 55 percent from the field and had 19 offensive rebounds, which really hurt us."

"They also had a transfer student who had a tremendous game. She scored 27 points and had 11 assists. There was no stopping her," he said.

Mahon also said the team is keeping their goals of doing well in the conference, winning the conference tournament and going to nationals in sight.

"From here on out is the most important part of the season, and we are going to make it the best we can."
